

PHOTOJOURNALIST: LINDA SOLOMON

Jill Rappaport, National Spokeswoman
Jack Rappaport, Ambassadog of Hope

The Jack and Jill Rappaport
National Public Awareness Campaign

Cancer and Companion Animals:
Best Friends, Best Treatment

Jack Rappaport is a lucky dog.

His mom Jill, the long-time entertainment correspondent for NBC's The TODAY Show and best-selling author, knew what to do when she noticed Jack limping and then felt a lump in his left foreleg.

She knew that there might be options for Jack, and brought him to a veterinary oncologist for treatment. Fortunately for Jack, after undergoing an amputation of his cancer-ridden leg and 6 rounds of chemotherapy, he is running and rolling around and enjoying his life with Jill.

Now, through The Jack and Jill Rappaport National Public Awareness Campaign, Jack and Jill have teamed up with Tails of Hope Foundation, Inc. ("Tails of Hope Foundation") and the American College of Veterinary Internal Medicine Foundation (the "ACVIM Foundation") to make sure that everyone else has the same critical information that Jill had about advanced cancer treatment options and the existence of Board-certified veterinary cancer specialists.

Why? So that companion animals across the nation have the chance to be as lucky as Jack and to look forward to a healthy future filled with hope.

For further information about The Jack and Jill Rappaport National Public Awareness Campaign or about Tails of Hope Foundation or the ACVIM Foundation, please contact either of those organizations at:

Tails of Hope Foundation, Inc.
P.O. Box 2325
Monroe, New York 10949
(845) 926-3478
www.tailsofhopefoundation.org

ACVIM Foundation
1997 Wadsworth Boulevard, Suite A
Lakewood, Colorado 80214-5239
(303) 231-9933 or (800) 245-9081
www.acvimfoundation.org